

Dear Sirs,

Allowing the use of cell phones in flight is a bad idea! I am a flight attendant, so I know first-hand that tensions already run too high with "air rage" an ever-present potential job hazard. Adding cell phone conversations to the mix would only make an already tense cabin environment even more stressful.

Furthermore, cell phones could conceivably be used to coordinate a terrorist attack in flight. This is another reason to continue the current policy of not allowing cell phones to be used in flight.

Frequent flyer customers have overwhelmingly stated they are FOR keeping the CURRENT cell phone policy in place.

This is just a bad idea from a work place environment, safety and customer satisfaction perspective. People already complain about "the airlines" too much. Why needlessly add another layer of discontent?

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Edward A. Boesen
